As long as I can remember I have been obsessed with solving problems. When something broke, I fixed it. When something was lost, I found it. If someone needed help, I was there. If it didn't look like it could be done, I sure as heck tried. Success in my obsession was not my motivation but rather the struggle for the solution. Nothing in my eyes is more rewarding than learning a process that achieves forward thinking. It doesn't always necessarily have to work as long as you've moved one step ahead from where you were to begin with. I am passionate about many things in my life but above all else I have a desire to help people. I hope to find a career that allows me to utilize my many skills in helping clients solve creative problems.
